

Global publisher Twinkl shines spotlight on Manchester with office launch

The Global educational publisher Twinkl, which has over 4 million members worldwide, is celebrating after opening a new office space in Manchester.

The company, which creates online teaching and learning materials for educators and schools, has expanded into the city after recognising the exceptional talent in Manchester in the digital and education sectors.

To celebrate the move Twinkl held a launch event at its new office space at WeWork on Quay Street last night (Wednesday 13th February). Professionals from across the city were in attendance including colleagues from the surrounding universities, businesses and local schools.

Jonathan Seaton, CEO and Founder of Twinkl, said: "We are really proud to have opened this additional space in Manchester and to have some really talented colleagues based here.

"Manchester is a vibrant and exciting city and the perfect place for us to expand as we continue to develop the digital resources we offer, including some really exciting ongoing work in augmented reality for education.

"It was fantastic that so many people were able to join us to celebrate and we really look forward to building on our connections and forming new partnerships in the city in the future."

Twinkl has over 480 team members worldwide, with a head office in Sheffield and an office in Wollongong Australia. Four team members are based at the Manchester office but the company has plans to expand the team based there in the upcoming months.

Founded in Sheffield in 2010, Twinkl helps educators and schools across the world by providing high-quality and trusted resources.
