

Triumph for Twinkl inclusion resources at annual education awards

Sheffield, UK | Wednesday 08 October 2025

Sheffield-based education resource provider, Twinkl, has beaten national competition to win at the latest nasen Awards 2025.

The prestigious awards, organised by the National Association for Special Educational Needs (nasen), took place on Friday 03 October and recognised a record number of inspiring organisations across SEND and inclusive education.

Twinkl is proud winner of the Resource for SEND 2025 award, highlighting its success in providing leading resources for learners with special educational needs and disabilities.

Georgina Durrant, Twinkl's National Educational Lead for Inclusion, attended the awards ceremony in Birmingham. She said: "I see first-hand every day how dedicated, hard working and incredible our inclusion team are and I'm so proud that they have all been rightly celebrated on a stage like this.

"The resources that we provide at Twinkl in our Inclusion Hub are changing how inclusion looks and feels in classrooms across the country. The amazing impact that it is having, plus awards like this, are testament to everybody's hard work and dedication to improving the lives of young people with SEND."

The award focused on 'impactful materials that raise awareness and provide evidence-based knowledge' that ultimately contributes towards 'positive learning experiences for children and young people with SEND'.

Twinkl's dedication and growing recognition in the sector is achieved through an experienced and growing team that includes teachers, SENDCos, occupational therapists, speech and language therapists.
