

Twinkl Supports Teachers and Schools Affected by LA Wildfires With Free Educational Resources

Free access to over one million resources and tools will help disrupted educators keep students learning

Los Angeles, California, 28 January 2025: Twinkl, the leading educational resource publisher, has announced that its platform will be free for all teachers, schools, and educational institutions impacted by the devastating wildfires in Los Angeles. With hundreds of schools and thousands of students affected by displacements, closures, and fire damage, Twinkl aims to support educators in continuing their vital work during this challenging time.

More than 600,000 Los Angeles students have had their schooling disrupted this month, with a number of schools still closed and in need of temporary locations and remote support. Meanwhile, teachers and students are among the thousands who have lost their homes to the fires.

Eligible schools and educators can access Twinkl's entire library of over one million resources – including lesson plans, interactive games, and AI tools - through a free six-month subscription, with no obligation or auto rollover at the end of that period. The initiative helps teachers, many of whom have been forced to teach remotely or in temporary spaces, provide high-quality education regardless of where they or their classes are located - ensuring every student continues to receive the instruction they need.

Jude Schroeder, Head of Twinkl USA and a former teacher, said, "Our hearts go out to everyone affected by the wildfires in Los Angeles. We want to do everything we can to support teachers and students whose education has been disrupted. By providing free access to Twinkl's platform and resource library, we hope to ease some of the burden educators and their schools face and help students continue their learning journey even in these difficult circumstances."

Impacted educators and schools can find more information and apply for free access by visiting the Twinkl website here.

Eligible schools will receive a six-month Ultimate subscription, which grants anyone with a school email address unlimited access to all of Twinkl's content and apps at no cost and with no future commitment to continue their subscription.

Twinkl USA already offers free access to specially curated content on its blog to help explain the California wildfires, as well as other natural disasters, to children. It also provides resources to help educators and students navigate periods of anxiety and grief.
